MAX ROSENTHAL CAUGHT MAY BE BROUGHT HERE

Alleged Bootlegger Wanted for Passing Worthless Check

WAS IN WILLIAMSPORT

Max Rosenthal, considered as one of the slickest bootleggers of the state and for many months a resident of Bellefonte until his unexpected departure from here in the fall of 1921, was caught in Williamsport and given a hearing in that city on Monday afternoon on a federal charge of violating the Volstead act. He furnished bail for $1,000 to answer the charge, said to be for illegally transporting liquor.

Rosenthal gained quite a reputation while in Bellefonte but left for parts unknown when it was learned that Sheriff Harry Dukeman had a warrant for his arrest. The sheriff followed one of his time-honored customs and kept up watchful waiting until he learned that the alleged bootlegger was in custody in Williamsport.

The warrant, which was issued by Kline Woodring, a local justice of the peace upon information furnished by R. N. VanIngen, was sent to Williamsport without delay to be served. When Rosenthal found that the warrant was to be served he sent word through a Williamsport attorney he has retained, asking Mr. Woodring to name bail. The justice informed that bail would be set in the sum of $1,000. It is understood that Rosenthal's attorney took vigorous exception to bail in that sum on what he considered a charge of not so much importance. However, there was no inclination on the part of the justice to reduce it. While there was a report that Rosenthal finally furnished bail for a hearing before Justice Woodring, we were unable to get any official confirmation.

The information made by R. N. Van Ingen charges Rosenthal with passing a check without funds in bank to meet its payment. The information was made about Nov. 21, 1921, right after Mr. Van Ingen, a local Overland automobile dealer, had taken it to the Centre County Banking company to deposit it and found that there were no funds for its payment, according to statements.

The check, it is alleged, was given as part payment on an Overland touring car which was kept in the sheriff's garage for about one year or more, the machine being confiscated shortly after it was purchased when found with booze in it, the liquor being taken with the car.

VanIngen went to considerable trouble and expense in getting the automobile back again. It is understood that he finally disposed of it to another party at a loss, which even the $200 check would not offset if made good. He could not, however, secure any sum to reimburse him for any loss on the deal unless civil action should be brought later.

American Legion Reception.

Great preparations are being made by the Brooks-Doll Post, No. 33, American Legion, for the public reception to State Commander William B. Healy to be held in the armory, Tuesday evening, Feb. 27. Good boxing, in which a number of local wearers of the padded mits will compete, has been arranged. Some splendid wrestling matches will also add to the entertainment. The main event of the evening will be the address of Commander Healy and it is quite likely a large crowd will be present to greet him and to hear him. The Woman's Auxiliary of the Legion has planned some tasty refreshments, and this feature no doubt will be very attractive. Included in the program for the party will be quartet music and a dance with ten piece orchestra furnishing the music. You are invited to come. The hour is 7:30.

Smoke-House and Meat Burned.

The smoke-house on the property on Pine St. occupied by the Curry family was destroyed by fire on Wednesday afternoon. The summer's supply of pork, which was being cured, was burned to a crisp. The fire caused excitement for a brief time while it burned, great clouds of smoke ascending into the air, the fat of the meat feeding the flames.

New Quarantines.

The Conrad home on East Logan St., Rash Bumgardner's home on Curtin St., C. O. Johnson's home on Curtin St., and the LeRoy Scull home on Wilson St., were quarantined for chicken pox. Homes quarantined for mumps were, John Dubbs, Lamb St.; C. R. Beatty, Lamb St., and Charles Schlow, Howard St.

"THE PENNSYLVANIA NEWS"

Newsy Paper for Employes of the P. R. R. Co.

"The Pennsylvania News" is an 8-page paper published by the employes for the employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. Paul M. Goheen, of Tyrone, is the Tyrone Division correspondent. "The Republican" is in receipt of a copy of the first issue and considers it a splendid paper for the Pennsy employe. The circulation is 105,000 each issue. There are several items of local interest in the first issue.

James Calvin Waddle, of Lock Haven, oldest retired man on the Tyrone Division, observed his 89th birthday on Feb 11. Of him, it is said, "For 39 years he served the Tyrone Division faithfully and well, 7 months as a freight brakeman, and the balance of the time time as a freight conductor. He was placed on the company's roll of honor on Nov. 1, 1903. He was never once disciplined for an infraction of the rules He was sick but a single day, and for a stretch of seven years, worked without missing a day."

"Jacob C Snyder, clerk at Bellefonte freight station, has just rounded out 39 years of service on Tyrone Division. For 25 years of this time he was agent and operator at Snow Shoe Intersection."

William W. Dean, conductor, who was severely injured at Howard by a derrick boom falling on his shoulder, is improving slowly, but will not be able to resume duty for some time."

"Wm. Jesse Derstine, former chief clerk in the Bellefonte freight station, now in the office of the Assistant General Freight Agent at Pittsburgh, Central Region, spent a few pleasant days in Bellefonte."

Car Nearly in Creek.

Dr. S. M. Nissley, that congenial Bellefonte veterinarian, almost tested the temperature of Bald Eagle creek last Thursday. He was just over the bridge and turned to drive up Bald Eagle valley in his car, when the steering wheel seemed to lock and the auto plunged over to the side of the road and down the embankment, which is very steep. "Doc" put on his brakes and locked the wheels solidly. The chains cut into the sod but the car kept on and stopped just as it reached the edge of the stream, which is quite deep at that point. One of the trucks used by B. H. Irwin, the Milesburg coal dealer, for delivering, was used in pulling the Nissley car back to the road, where it was found neither the veterinarian nor his car were any the worse for the experience.

Consider Bank Adjustment.

At a meeting of the depositors committee of the Centre County Bank held last Friday evening a compromise proposition relative to the disputed liability of George R. Meek was considered. No action was taken. Without conceding any legal liability as a partner, Mr. Meek appeared before the committee and submitted his proposition, looking to some basis for adjustment. The committee discussed the matter at some length. Whether it will be given further consideration before the scheduled hearing in the federal court of appeals, in Philadelphia, in March, was not announced.

Case of Scarlet Fever.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Frank Hoag, on North Thomas street, was quarantined for scarlet fever this week. This is only the second case of scarlet fever to be noted recently, the other being at the Roy Witmer home and the patient in the latter home, little Miss Pauline, although seriously ill for a time, has about recovered. There should be care exercised, however and no chances will be taken by the board of health as the disease is reported prevalent in some sections of the state quite close to Centre County.

OUR OLDEST MERCHANT TO OBSERVE BIRTHDAY

John D. Sourbeck Will Be 74 Years Old on Tuesday.

NATIVE OF LEWISTOWN

John D. Sourbeck, hale and hearty, will observe his 74th birthday anniversary next Tuesday. He lays claim to being the oldest merchant in Bellefonte, since the death of Hammon Sechler, that is, to having the oldest established business. He has been in business here continuously for 46 years.

Born in Lewistown on Feb. 27, 1849, he came to Bellefonte with his parents when he was 3 years old and has ever since been a resident. For many years his father conducted the Garman House and the old opera house, destroyed by fire one morning when the thermometer registered 15 degrees below zero. Some of the older residents of the town remember that blaze and how the firemen fought valiantly, with their clothes frozen, and old-time booze was imbibed freely to prevent illness or death from exposure.

The family resided in apartments above where Miss M. H. Snyder's millinery store is located, which was back in the days when the corner of Bishop and Allegheny Sts. was familiarly known as "Strychnine Corner." The genial confectioner recalls vividly some of the exciting gatherings of those days when the town had many rough characters, including some turbulent iron workers and lumberjacks who visited the saloons at "Strychnine Corner" and often became noisy and full of "scrap." The corner in those times was vastly different from today.

John D. Sourbeck started business in the room in the Brockerhoff House now occupied by C. D. Casebeer. That was in 1876. For the past 36 years he has been in the Brachbill room on High St.

Of his family of three sons and two daughters—Bertha, Mary (Mrs. Bellringer,) John, Fred and Harris,—only Mrs. Bellringer, of Jamaica, L. I., with whom he frequently visits, remains. A grandson, Joseph, and his wife, share the home in the Garman dwelling on the corner of Spring and High Sts., with Mr. Sourbeck. His wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Fitzpatrick, died 8 years ago on the 11th of this month.

Perhaps there is not another resident in Centre County who has attained the age of Mr. Sourbeck who has enjoyed such remarkable health. Only once was he seriously ill, and that was just a few years ago, when he suffered a fracture of the skull, being knocked to the brick street near the Pennsylvania railroad station when he was run down by an automobile. At that time he was in the hospital for the only time he was ever in such an institution. His many friends were then alarmed about his condition, but his rugged constitution withstood the injury and he has apparently regained normal health.

So rugged is he physically that frequently he has been seen at the door of his store on the coldest days, in his shirt sleeves, never being annoyed by the weather. Stepping from his little candy shop, overheated and perspiring, he takes a risk which would mean the death of many others and seemingly never minds it. So remarkable is this stunt of Mr. Sourbeck's that some of his friends believe he has become accustomed to it and therefore feels no ill effects, but rather pleasure from it.

For his birthday, "The Republican" extends hearty good wishes to Mr. Sourbeck.

Radio Fans Notice.

Fans in Bellefonte and nearby towns have received word from the broadcasting stations, all over the country, to send them a message as to how and from where they are getting their program. L. W. Miller, manager of the Bellefonte office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., will keep his office open until 10 o'clock on Friday evening, so that fans may send their messages to the broadcasting stations. Do not forget the date and time. Try to have your message at the office early so as to get it through in good older. It will be repeated to you, over your radiophone.

Blame Ruts for Collision.

In a collision in which one of Emerick's busses driven by Howard Shuey and a car driven by Musser Coldren, of Centre Hall, were slightly damaged on Monday morning, ruts were blamed for the accident. A fender on the Coldren car was bent and a hole was knocked in the one side of the body of the bus.

JUSTICE FINED HUNTERS THEY WOULD NOT PAY

Attorney Says Appeal from Decision is Filed.

KILLED WOUNDED DEER

Joseph Cole and John McCartney, two hunters of Snow Shoe, charged with killing a deer out of season and whose case had been continued until last Friday morning by Kline Woodring, Bellefonte justice of the peace, to permit the taking of mo[illegible] were each fined $100 and co[illegible] latter being in the neighborhood of $15. The men were represented by William G. Runkle, attorney, who said [illegible]ppeal for a new trial had been filed, the hunters refusing to pay the fine.

Thomas Mosier, game protector and prosecutor in the case, accompanied by State Traveling Game Protector Hogarth, of Bradford, were present at the hearing. The latter was very vigorous in presenting the technical point in the law which makes it clear that no deer shall be killed out of season, but that the finding of a wounded deer should be properly reported so as to ascertain what disposition to make of it.

The new evidence submitted in the case emphasized the hunters had killed the deer because it was the humane thing to do, it being shown the animal was badly wounded when found, and that they fully intended to and did report it, but were delayed.

The technical point in the law, however, made it impossible for the justice to do other than fine each of the hunters.

FAMILY REUNION

Children and Grandchildren Gather at Gilliland Home.

In honor of the birthdays of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Gilliland, two of State College's best known citizens, the children and grandchildren gathered at the cosy home on Sunday and had a splendid time. Mr. Gilliland was 72 years old on Monday and his wife was 68, the same day. It was easier for the children to meet on Sunday, however, and so the birthdays were observed then. It was the first time the family had all been together at one time since five years ago.

There were 38 present including the 9 children, with their wives and husbands, and children, as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shilling and daughter, of Bellefonte; Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Everhart and four children, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Moore and two sons, and Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Stout, all of Altoona; Mr. and Mrs. R. Sims and three children, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. James Huff, of Unionville; Mr. and Mrs. John Gilliland and one child, Mr. and Mrs. George Gilliland and one child, of State College; Miss Belle, at home; and also Mr. and Mrs. John Bliecht of Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gilliland, of Altoona; Messrs. Bliecht and Albert Gilliland being grandsons.

Smith Case Up Tomorrow.

Floyd Smith, who has spent two Christmas seasons in the grim deathhouse at Rockview and waited in doubt while scores of men convicted of murder went to their doom at an early hour on Monday mornings, may know his fate e'er the week is past. Smith's case comes before the Pardon Board at its meeting tomorrow. The weak links which circumstantial evidence has forged about Smith and brought his body so close to the electric chair, must stand a final test at this meeting. Smith has declared his innocence, but for almost two years he has been kept close to the death chair, only the solid walls of the deathhouse keeping it from his view. In the meantime, friends of justice who had never known Smith, are doing their utmost to have him pardoned.

Y. M. C. A. Banquet.

The annual banquet of the "Y" members will be held on Tuesday evening in the gymnasium at 6:30. Reports will be made on the work of the past year and plans of the coming year's work will be given by members of the board. A splendid social event is being planned by the committee in charge. The Women's Auxiliary and Y. W. Girls will have charge of the catering. The banquet is for the older boys, senior members and contributors to the "Y." Tickets can be secured at the office at $1 each.

Coal Miner Hurt.

John Poskovish sustained injuries about the thigh as the result of being caught under a fall of rock at one of the mines of the Cato Coal Co. on Monday morning. He was taken to the Lock Haven hospital.

DEWEY JUSTICE INJURED

Well-Known Quarry Foreman Has Fracture of Right Leg.

Dewey Justice, one of the best known quarry foremen employed by the American Lime & Stone Co., had a very narrow escape from death and was seriously injured on Monday afternoon at the Buffalo Run quarry "mine."

For some time past, the quarrymen have been blasting out the rock and going into the ground somewhat like working the opening of a coal mine, so that the operation has been termed the "mine." Mr. Justice was walking into the opening when a rock, estimated to weigh in the neighborhood of a ton, it was said, dropped unexpectedly from the "roof" and side-swiped him, cutting his head. This injury is not regarded as anything serious, but the rock was of such size that the foreman is fortunate it did not strike him with its full force.

This rock was followed by a much smaller stone, yet of good size, which struck him fair on the right leg above the knee and caused a serious fracture. Fellow workmen saw his plight and came to his assistance, summoning a physician who ordered him taken to the Bellefonte hospital. His condition is reported as serious but favorable and, unless complications develop, his recovery in due time is anticipated. He is a young married man residing at Valley View, and his many friends hope that the injuries may not prove more serious.

Will Repair Bridge.

At a meeting of the Centre County and Clinton County Commissioners in Lock Haven last Thursday, it was decided to repair and refloor the inter-county bridge which spans Beech Creek. Bids are being advertised for and will be opened at a joint meeting of the County Commissioners to be held in Bellefonte on March 16 The bids will require that the work be done without delay. The repairs include laying of a creosote block floor, new girders to replace the rusted and light girders, attractive latticed guard rails on both sides of the structure and the whole to be painted in a light color. The bridge is thirty years old and it is believed the repairing will put it in first class shape for a number more years.

Pioneer Was 87 on Saturday.

T. R. Hamilton, one of the pioneers in getting into Colorado and the great gold and silver mining sections of the great west, who for many years has been a well-known citizen of Bellefonte, observed his 87th birthday on Saturday. He still enjoys remarkable health and is about daily, having retired from active business when he closed his planing mill several years ago. Mr. Hamilton is quite well known throughout the county. He was located at Philipsburg for some time before taking up his residence in Bellefonte, but has been here during the best years of his life, is best known here and held in high esteem by his many friends.

MOTHERS' ASSISTANCE FUND GIVEN INCREASE

Only Department of State Increased Over 1921.

PRESERVING THE HOME

One million seven hundred fifty thousand dollars for Mothers' Assistance for the next two years is the amount carried in the Appropriation Bill introduced in the House of Representatives on Jan. 29. This is the amount which Gov. Pinchot has allowed in his budget for the Mothers' Assistance Fund. If approved by the Legislature this will provide, when matched by the counties, $1,750,000 for each of the next two fiscal years.

Gov. Pinchot acted in the interest of sound economy as well as in the interest of preserving the homes of Pennsylvania's fatherless children when he recognized the desperate need for more adequate funds and increased the Mothers' Assistance Fund appropriation 75%, the only department of the state government which was allotted an increase over its 1921 appropriation.

The last appropriation of $1,000,000 was sufficient to care for 2553 families including 9257 children. On the waiting list are over 5000 families and 17,000 children who cannot now be assisted for lack of funds. Even if the Legislature allows the full $1,750,000 there will not be sufficient to care for all. Although Pennsylvania has assumed in law, with 40 other states, its responsibility for the care of these fatherless children it is now assisting only about one-third of the eligible families; homes are being broken up, children separated from their mothers and placed in institutions, or mothers who are struggling to earn a living and at the same time care for their children in their own homes, are fighting a losing battle with poverty, under-nourishment, disease and neglect.

Gov. Pinchot realized that home grown children are gilt-edged investments. It costs at least $18 a month for each child cared for adequately in an institution. Philadelphia is paying $18.31 for each child boarded in an orphanage; but it costs the state only between $10 and $12 a month per child under the Mothers' Assistance Fund.

But there is another argument for home-grown children besides its economy. President Roosevelt said, "Home life is the highest and finest product of civilization." It is to preserve home life and a mother's care to Pennsylvania's dependent, fatherless children that the Legislature passed the Mothers' Assistance Law in 1913. The Pennsylvania Law is administered by unpaid county boards of women trustees who provide free medical aid for mothers and children, examine the school records of all children regularly, and advise with the mothers on all kinds of household and financial problems. The aim of the trustees is to help the mothers rear their children in normal homes in order that they may grow up to be healthy, useful citizens of the state.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT STAND

Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I was not able to stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework. The doctor said an operation might be necessary. I read testimonial letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I am now well and strong, doing all my work for a family of four, all my washing and my sewing, which I think is remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine, but had done all my sewing by hand. I truly feel that were it not for your medicine I would not be here today as my case seemed very serious."—Mrs. GEORGE W. BURCHELL, Glens Falls, N. Y.

RECIPE FOR COTTAGE CHEESE PIE

Try Some Cottage Cheese Pie.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Blend one tablespoonful of cornstarch gradually with two-thirds cupful of sugar, one cupful of cottage cheese, two beaten egg yolks, one tablespoonful butter or melted fat, one-eighth teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful vanilla. Bake in a pie shell that has been prebaked for ten minutes or until it begins to color slightly. It must not be brown, or the finished pie will be dark and unpalatable. Bake in a moderately cool oven. When set, cool slightly and cover with a meringue made by adding two tablespoonfuls of sugar to the beaten white of two eggs; one-half teaspoonful of vanilla may be added. Brown the meringue in a slow oven.

BUYING KITCHEN STOVE OR RANGE

Convenient Position Should Be Decided Upon Before Any Selection Is Made.

ALLOW FOR OPENING OF OVEN

Hot-Water Boiler Should Never Be Placed Below Level of Firebox—Floor Should Be Covered With Fireproof Material.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Before choosing a stove or range its proper position in the kitchen should be determined. For the comfort and convenience of the workers the stove is generally placed somewhat apart from the other equipment. Allowance must be made for opening the oven door readily. The oven is usually on the right and the firebox on the left, but in some stoves this is reversed. Where room is limited, an oven door that opens downward instead of to right or left is a convenience.

Kitchen Range Conveniently Located.

Room for Water Boiler.

Room must be allowed for the hot-water boiler, if there is one. It need not, however, be placed at the side of the range, but may be suspended from the ceiling, though the horizontal boiler is not so effective as the vertical type.

It must, however, never be placed below the level of the range, as the water will not circulate and heat satisfactorily under this condition. Since a boiler gives off considerable heat, it may be economical sometimes to put it a little distance from the stove and where this heat may be utilized, as for example, in the bathroom, say household specialists of United States Department of Agriculture.

The floor under the stove or range should be made of or covered with some fireproof material. A built-in base of cement or brick is best, but when this is impossible some one of the composition materials, made of a mixture of cement and asbestos, which can be bought by the square foot, will do very well as a protection for the floor and also for the walls back of the stove. Sheets of metal placed directly over wooden walls near the fire box of a stove are not sufficient protection. Some architects recommend a layer of plaster, preferably on metal laths, and separated from the wooden wall by metal furring. As an added precaution, sheet metal should be blocked away from the plaster with metal pieces.

Fuel Is Big Factor.

The kind of cook stove chosen will be determined largely by the available fuel supply, and its size by the amount of work to be done with it. It should be of reliable make, not only to insure good construction but also to make sure that parts can be easily renewed as needed. A larger range than is needed for cookery is often selected in many homes where the kitchen fire is used for cooking and also for heating in cold weather. It would be wiser in many cases to use a liquid fuel stove in winter for cooking purposes or else to have a small range for cooking and additional heater for warming the kitchen in winter, thus saving fuel and avoiding the overheating of the house in summer.

LEFT-OVER RICE FOR MAKING HOT MUFFINS

Easiest Ways for Disposing of Waste Materials

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the easiest and most palatable ways of disposing of a small amount of left-over cooked rice is to use it for hot muffins or waffles in combination with corn meal or wheat flour, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

Rice Waffles.

1 cupful wheat flour.	2 eggs.
1 teaspoonful salt.	1 teaspoonful butter, drippings, or other fat.
1½ teaspoonfuls baking powder.

Press the rice through a coarse sieve. Sift the flour, the salt, and the baking powder together, then add the milk, the yolks of eggs, the rice, and the melted fat, and finally fold in the beaten whites of eggs. Have the waffle iron hot and well greased. This recipe may also be used for rice fritters by adding one tablespoonful of sugar and frying in deep fat. If preferred, the grains of rice may be left whole.

Rice and Corn Muffins.

2 cupfuls corn meal.	1 cupful cooked rice.
1 tablespoonful sugar.	2 cupfuls sweet milk.
½ teaspoonful salt.	1 egg.
3½ teaspoonfuls baking powder.	1 tablespoonful fat.

Sift the meal, the sugar, the salt, and the baking powder together. Mix the rice, the milk, the well-beaten egg, and the melted fat; then add the meal and other dry ingredients. Bake the mixture in well-greased muffin pans. This will make 14 to 18 average muffins.

COOKING MOST DRIED FRUITS

Most Important Point to Be Observed Is Not to Soak or Cook in Too Much Water.

Dried fruits are usually given a long, slow cooking in water below the boiling point. They may be soaked for a few hours, or they may simply be washed and put directly into the warm water for cooking. The important point to be observed, says the United States Department of Agriculture, is not to soak or cook in too much water. The dried product cannot be expected to have as much flavor as does the fresh, so pains must be taken to dilute that flavor as little as possible.

Most recipes for cooking dried prunes and apricots direct that two cupfuls of water be used to one cupful of fruit; but a better-flavored product will result if equal measures of water and fruit be used, and the cooking is done slowly in a tightly covered vessel, so that little of the steam escapes.

Dried fruits may be sweetened slightly with sugar, or with any sort of sirup. They usually contain a good deal of sugar themselves. They are to be used for sauce, in puddings, fruit cakes and cookies, compotes, whips, souffles, and even salads, much as fresh fruits are used.

All About the Vonsiatsky-Vonsiatskys!

Here's an interesting triangle that will presumably be elucidated in the American courts. Parties: Anatase Andrevitch Vonsiatsky-Vonsiatsky; his American wife and a Russian woman who claims to be his wife. The latter is now in this country and brought a lawyer with her. Mlle. Liobouv Mourimsky, to use her maiden name, is twenty-three, pretty, petite and chic—and had nothing to say when she landed.

The marriage a year ago of the youthful Anastase to Mrs. Marion Ream Stephens, who inherited one-seventh of the $40,000,000 estate of her father, Norman B. Ream, brought bitter threats from the young Russian woman, then in Paris.

At the time that Anastase married the heiress, who was almost twice his age, a divorced woman, the Russian woman declared her intention of prosecuting him on a charge of bigamy, and actually laid such a charge at the American embassy. She vowed also that she would bring suit against the American wife of Anastase to recover $500,000 for alienation of his affections.

The talk of prosecution on a charge of bigamy died after authorities at the Russian cathedral of St. Nicholas, where Anastase and Mrs. Stephens were married Feb. 3, 1922, declared that his marriage to Liobouv Mourimsky, which took place two years earlier in a cathedral in Russia, was void.

E. T. Sanford Named for Supreme Court

Edward Terry Sanford has been nominated by President Harding to be associate justice of the United States Supreme court in the place of Justice Pitney, resigned and retired on account of ill health amounting to physical inability. Judge Sanford has been United States district judge of the eastern and middle districts of Tennessee since 1908. Before that he was assistant attorney general of the United States. It was said at the time of his nomination that there probably would be a fight in congress against his confirmation, the possible opposition questioning the political wisdom of the appointment, rather than its fitness.

Judge Sanford was born in Knoxville, Tenn., in 1865. He is a college man and holds various degrees, including A. B., Harvard, 1885, A. M. and LL.B., 1889. He was admitted to the bar in 1888 and was a lecturer in the law department of the University of Tennessee, 1898-1907. He was a delegate to the universal congress of lawyers and jurists in St. Louis in 1904. He has served as vice president of the American Bar association and president of the Tennessee Bar association. His nomination was promptly confirmed.

Fred Lundin, Political "Mystery Man"

Everybody in Chicago and Illinois is talking politics. The whole state is "het up" over Mayor William Hale Thompson's announcement that he is not a candidate for re-election and the indictment of Fred Lundin in connection with charges of graft in the Chicago board of education.

Lundin is more or less a "mystery man" to the citizens of Illinois. He is popularly credited with being the longtime boss of the Thompson-Lundin-Small machine.

Lundin was born in Sweden in 1868. The date of his arrival in Chicago is not known. He first was a newsboy. Then he appeared peddling "Juniper Ade," a non-alcoholic beverage, with a wagon and two negro guitar players. Here is a contemporaneous description of the future Warwick, about thirty years ago:

"The driver himself was a youth of odd appearance. A cowboy hat of colossal proportions topped a mass of yellow hair and shadowed eyes that scanned the hurrying throngs on either hand, mysteriously, through huge amber glasses. The effect was enhanced by a full-tailed coat of black, which might have been designed for an undertaker—a vest of pristine whiteness, a snowy shirt front, a flowing black tie, and a rolling collar."

Lundin served in the Illinois state senate from 1894 to 1898. In 1908 he was elected to congress. Defeated for re-election he retired from personal battles for office, declaring, "I am out of politics." And he has reiterated the declaration ever since.

Quinonez, New President of Salvador

The citizens of Salvador have elected a new president. Dr. Alfonso Quinones y Molina, the new chief magistrate, is fifty years old, and has devoted much of his life to the affairs of government. On graduating in the National university with a degree of bachelor of science, he took a post course and became a doctor of medicine.

In 1912 he was elected to his first public office, that of mayor of the capital city, San Salvador. He served as vice president from 1915 to 1919. He would have been a candidate for the presidency for the period of 1919-1923 had he not become ineligible through having managed the affairs of the government during the illness of the president, Carlos Melendez. The people of Salvador have for twenty-five years shown themselves entirely capable of choosing their chief executives, for no government has been overthrown by force during that period of time. Dr. Quinonez is an ardent Unionist. His country was the first to attempt, many years ago, the establishment of a Central American federation. Salvador is the most densely populated of the countries on the mainland of the American continent. In an area no larger than the state of New Jersey live 1,400,000 people—over one hundred to the square mile. The principal export is coffee. The crop of a few seasons ago reached 75 million pounds.

MOHER GAVE THE CHILD HYPO-COD; WORKED MAGIC

"My little girl was so delicate, frail and thin and she suffered so much with weak, fainting spells that we had doctors and tried everything. Nothing helped her, however. I was discouraged until one night I read in the Press what a mother said about Hypo-Cod helping her child grow strong and well. I read what she said and ran all the way to the drug store to get a bottle. I brought it home, gave it to our little girl according to directions, and it worked like magic, for it was only a short time until she was strong and gaining weight fast. She got over the weakness and fainting spells and never has the many more. She looks and feels fine all the time. I thank God I was permitted to see that advertisement, for Hypo-Cod was just what she needed. I really believe that if we hadn't known about Hypo-Cod she would have died," declared Mrs. G. Kormich, 196 Violet Alley, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Thousands of mothers keep their children built up with Hypo-Cod. It tastes so nice children love to take it and it is so pure and wholesome no one should hesitate a minute. It is so risky to let children drag around half sick this time of year. Hypo-Cod isn't expensive. All druggists have it. Avoid cheap substitutes.—Advertisement.

Heirs Fight for Wealth of Thief

Death of Bill the Brute, Clark Parker of Pasadena, Starts Contest for $1,000,000.

EX-BURGLAR DIED A RECLUSE

International Thief Invested an Inheritance and Quadrupled It—Biggest Coup Was Robbery of Bank of Lyons.

New York.—What would the old cronies in crime of Clark Parker, once internationally infamous as Bill the Brute, burglar, thief and receiver of stolen goods, say if they knew he left an estate of $1,000,000 for eminently respectable relatives and heirs to squabble over?

What might be the comment of his one-time pal, Eddie Guerin, bad man from the West who achieved no end of notoriety as the only man ever to escape from dread Devil's island, the French penal colony where Dreyfus and untold other unfortunates languished? What would Eddie think of that cool million, Eddie who robbed the silk-lined Bank of Lyons of 200,000 francs with Bill the Brute, but who had to be sentenced to a British jail at sixty-one in 1920 for filching pennies from a pedestrian?

Died a Recluse.

Clark Parker died in Pasadena, Cal., in January, 1922, a recluse millionaire, aged eighty. For many years he was well known to the police of America and Europe, but suddenly settled down to respectability in Boston.

His brother, Benjamin Parker, was at the time a resident of Boston and one respected alike in business and society. He was the Molasses King and he bequeathed his entire fortune in trust to the reformed Clark. Clark quadrupled it by carefu' investments—honest investments—and in 1910 moved to the Pacific coast, living in seclusion until his wife's death, alone after she was taken from him.

Bill the Brute did not win his brother's fortune without a bitterly fought legal contest. Dr. Frederick P. Gay, now a member of the University of California faculty, his nephew, led a band of relatives in a joint attack on the will and its benefactor on the ground that Benjamin Parker had been unduly influenced.

Now Clark Parker is dead and his will divided the greatly enhanced fortune of Benjamin Parker among the Masons and Elks of Los Angeles and Pasadena and a long list of one-time friends. A "birthday gift" of $1,000 is all Doctor Gay is supposed to get.

Again Doctor Gay leads a fight on the will. He and Jefferson H. Parker of Boston are the nearest blood relations left by old Bill the Brute. And they have filed a contest on the ground that the will and its codicils are illegal, that the deceased was unduly influenced in drawing up the instrument, and furthermore incompetent.

Many interests will be represented in the defense of the will. The Masons and Elks are, naturally enough, most prominent, for between them they are to receive $375,000 if the will stands unbroken.

Began by Killing.

Parker began his criminal career when he was still in his 'teens, killing a seaman in a brawl aboard a sailing vessel. He served a term in a Massachusetts penitentiary for the crime and it started him on a series of depredations in America, England, France and Canada. In each of those countries he served time.

All kinds of burglaries and thefts received his attention and he committed them under all kinds of names—Clark Parker, Charles Parker, William Stetson, George Goodman. Bill the Brute was the title bestowed upon him by envious rivals of his nefarious profession when his career was at its height. Later, when he had lost his nerve and contented himself with acting as a fence for stolen goods, that imposing nickname was changed to plain English Bill.

Parker's biggest coup was the robbery of the Bank of Lyons in 1891, planned and executed with the daring Eddie Guerin, then the boldest and shrewdest criminal in Europe, not to say the most dapper. Eddie hired a French chauteau and lived in it with a dazzling blonde from Chicago while they planned the robbery; that's the kind of a crook he was.

The robbery was accomplished easily enough and Parker and Guerin went into a cemetery nearby to divide the spoils. A sharp quarrel ensued and in a moment of excitement and anger Parker shot Guerin, seriously wounding him. No sooner had he fired, however, when he repented and at the risk of capture assisted Guerin to London. Parker fled to Boston.

Truck Climbs Over Ditches

NEW DEPARTURE IN TRACTORS

Glides on Asphalt Pavement Without Leaving Scratch, Then Goes Over Ditches, Up Hills and Over Roadless Territory.

Washington.—A truck capable of carrying two and a half tons over ditches, up hills and through roadless territory, just as did the tanks of World war days, has been demonstrated to high army officers and members of the house and senate military committees here, with a view to having the type adopted as standard for the army.

With Assistant Secretary of War Wainwright, General Pershing, officers of the general staff and the ordnance and supply departments of the army and congressmen looking on, the 10,000-pound tractor-truck went through its paces, first demonstrating its speed and practicability on the asphalt pavement and not leaving a scratch on the road's smooth surface.

Then came the tests for war uses. Down the side of the embankment into Rock Creek park it went, carrying among its passengers Maj. Gen. William H. Hart, quartermaster general of the army. In this untraveled territory the truck crossed successfully a network of ditches in the deep ravine below a bridge. Only once in the series of tests to which the army man had the machine put did it falter. Straight up the side of a ditch, at an angle of about 40 degrees, it started. Half way up the frozen ground gave the rear tractors no purchase, and for a moment the truck hung there. With a twist of the steering wheel the tractors bit the ground and up went the big truck.

This "roadless truck" is a new departure in tractors. Instead of the usual leaf or coil spring that takes the load of the great truck in crossing obstructions it is equipped with a suspension cable that spreads the weight of the truck over the entire chassis, giving the huge bulk a pressure of only 13½ pounds a square inch on a hard roadway and 9½ pounds where the steel shoes come in contact with the ground on softer surfaces. A "snake track," having a radius about which the machine will turn, gives the truck almost as much flexibility as an ordinary automobile and prevents the scuffing of the road so common in tractors. A demonstration of how the weight is spread out by the suspension cable was given by running the 10,000-pound truck over a series of pine blocks, leaving no marks on them, and without jarring the occupants. As a final demonstration of the ease with which it can be manipulated Mrs. William H. Coburn of Chestnut Hill, Mass., took the driver's seat and put the big machine through all the tests again.

The construction of the truck is a distinct departure from all previous types and it is the first one built in this country. Built on the general principle of a suspension bridge, the roadless truck was designed especially for use in oil fields and other virgin territory where no roads exist. So perfectly does this cable function, it is said, the machine could pass over a man's leg without seriously injuring it, the weight not applying in one spot as in other types. Army experts believe this type will help to solve the problem of carrying heavy loads over light roads without the resulting damage that has led to so much protest against the use of heavy cars on boulevards and other smooth roads.

New Lubrication Scheme.

One phase of peculiar interest to the technical men present was the scheme of interior lubrication, which, they believe, overcomes one of the principal difficulties to which tractors have been subject. Heretofore in running through sand there has been much trouble over the mixing of sand and oil, which quickly cuts the bearings. This new invention forces the oil out, the pressure being sufficient to keep the sand from working its way into the bearings.

The truck made the trip down to Washington from New York at an average speed slightly in excess of nine miles an hour. The rubber tread with which the front wheels and rear tractors are equipped showed little sign of wear.

U. S. MILITIA COPIED BY ITALY

Mussolini's New State Troops Modeled on National Guard.

Men Are Unpaid and Drill Only in Spare Time—Former Soldiers and Members of Fascisti Are Joining Ranks.

Rome.—Premier Mussolini's newly organized state militia, which is mainly enlisted from the fascisti, is built on the plan of the National Guard organizations in the United States. Service in the Italian militia is voluntary, and is unpaid unless on active service. Its members follow their regular occupations and drill in case of civil disorder, while, in the event of war, they will be merged into the regular army.

Already the new organization is filled with former soldiers and lads who took part in the recent historic fascisti coup, when Premier Mussolini was called to head the government. Preference in choosing the personnel of the new force is given to fascisti. Moderate nationalists, Fiume legionnaries and those of "proven Italian faith" are given the second consideration.

Units of the new militia will be placed in every town, just as National Guard units are distributed in the towns and cities of America. While no definite orders have been issued regarding the uniform of the new force, it is expected that the black shirt of the fascisti will be adopted. It has been pointed out that the black shirt is now traditional, just as was the red shirt in Garibaldi's time. The men in the new body are said to favor the black shirt in preference to an army uniform, for it was in these shirts they made their celebrated march on Rome.

The new militia may be called to garrison duty in the Italian colonies in Africa. There they would supersede the regular army, the units of which would be returned to Italy for training in war tactics.

Canada Offers Farmers their chance to get ahead

IF your hard work and investments are not giving you the return they should—if high land prices and high rentals are blocking your road to Success—if you are beginning to see how hard it is to compete with low-priced lands that are equally fertile, you owe it to yourself and your family to get the facts about farm opportunities in Canada. Lower-priced land—lower overhead—lower taxes and operating costs—may be the solution of your problem.

Low-Priced Land—the Secret

Virgin prairie land at $15 to $30 an acre, with long terms, if you want them, close to railways and market towns, schools, churches, telephones, highways—these vast virgin prairies offer you the last great farm opportunity. The fortunes of the United States were built on low-priced land. Those lands are now dear—perhaps beyond your reach—but Canada's lands are still low-priced. You may have missed the first chance—don't miss the last.

Your Own Farm—Prosperity, Happiness

The opportunity that fits your particular financial and family needs awaits you in Canada, and the Canadian Government Agent will help you find it. Land of great and continuous fertility, (Western Canada's wheat crop in 1922 was the biggest in history), land suitable for stock-raising, dairying, mixed farming, fodder crops, market gardening, to suit your experience and your pocketbook. Land that will pay for itself in a few years' crops; hundreds of Canadian farms have produced crops in one year worth more than the price of the land.

Rent If You Prefer—Pay Out of Profits

The Canadian Government has devised a means by which you can "try out" a farm for a year or two before investing, and at the same time increase your capital for the day when you are ready to buy a farm of your own. Many Canadian land owners are willing to rent a portion of their holdings; others are already retiring and will rent on easy terms, in some cases giving an option of purchase. If you have a farm outfit, or the means of buying it, even if your other capital is small, this is your chance to try out the country for yourself. Seeing is believing. See for yourself. A year or two on a rented farm may be the road to success. If you have present holdings which you cannot sell to advantage, hold them another year or two, conditions may improve, but start in Canada at once. Lands are being taken up; nothing is gained by delay.

Taxes Favor the Producing Farmer

Western Canada's tax system encourages farm production and the improvement of property. Taxes on an improved farm are less than on an unimproved one, and there are no taxes at all on the farmer's buildings, machinery, live stock, automobile, crops, or personal effects. Tax laws are designed to aid the farmer in building up a home of his own.

Get the Facts—Costs You Nothing

The Canadian Government maintains Information Bureaus where you can get the facts—dependable Government information—without cost. The officials are not land agents—they have nothing personally to sell—they are salaried officials of the Government of Canada, maintained to be of service to you, without any charge. Let us know something of your position, and receive free book with maps, and the free service of the Canadian Government Agent in your territory; also information how special railway rates can be arranged for a trip of inspection.

NOW BALD EAGLE DISTRICT

Number of Changes Made in Grouping Forests.

During 1922 the Karoondinha Forest District underwent a number of important changes, the first one being the absorption of almost one-half of the old Bald Eagle district, increasing the forest area to over 350,000 acres. Of this over 110,000 acres is State-owned forest land. The district took the name Bald Eagle, not for the mountains, as supposed, but because this region was the famous hunting ground of Chief Bald Eagle.

The regular working force was increased by 2 rangers and an assistant forester, and the protection force to 13 fire bosses and 78 fire wardens. The fire bosses, who were promoted, were fire wardens, who are able to give special service during fire season. The fire boss receives a small remuneration while the fire wardens receive pay only for actual time fighting fires.

The Bald Eagle district is now made up of the following five divisions: Nahantango, composed of Shade mountain and the north part of Snyder County, under the direct supervision of Ranger Wm. C. Maurer, Paxtonville; Captain Jack, composed of Jacks mountain, located in Snyder and southern and Union counties, under the supervision of Ranger Chas. J. Middleswarth, Troxelville; Buffalo, composed of the mountain land north of the Buffalo valley, under the supervision of Rangers David Libby, Welkert, Carl D. Motz, Woodward, and James Tate, Millmont; White Deer, composed of White Deer and Spruce Run water sheds, under the supervision of Rangers D. R. Harbeson, White Deer; Ralph E. Roadarmel, Mifflinburg, and Leslie M. Stover, Loganton; McElhattan, composed of the lands of the district north of Sugar valley, under the supervision of Ranger David F. Bixel, Loganton.

Big Summer Session.

The thousands of public school teachers in the state who are interested in attending summer training school can now receive the new catalogue of the Penna. State College Summer Session, just published. Indications point to the coming session turning out to be the largest and most successful ever conducted at State College. Almost 2700 men and women were enrolled last summer when the session was the largest at any college, university or normal school in the state. A great reputation for the school was built up by Dean Will Grant Chambers, and the coming session promises to exceed last year's in the variety and attractiveness of courses for teachers. A faculty of over 200 has been engaged for the summer school, a large number of them from other schools and colleges than Penn State. Copies of the bulletin may be obtained from the Summer Session Office, State College, Pa.

Elmer Weaver, of Mt. Pleasant, Sugar valley, sustained painful internal injuries on Friday afternoon when caught under a tree on the W. M. Bickford timber tract near Haneyville, Clinton County. Fellow workmen noticed that he was caught when the tree was cut down and started to fall before Weaver saw it. It was fortunate that the trunk of the tree missed his body, it being outer limbs that struck him. He was taken to the Lock Haven hospital where it is thought he will recover.

SADLY AFFLICTED FAMILY.

Parents Dead and Children Ill From Influenza.

Perhaps the saddest pall of sorrow ever cast over Sugar valley prevailed the past week when Mr. and Mrs. John Herman were taken from this life and left a babe and four other children very ill from influenza.

Mr. Herman died last Thursday afternoon and his wife passed away on Friday morning at 6 o'clock. Both were thirty two years of age. Death was caused by influenza which developed into pneumonia.

A babe, born on Tuesday night preceding the mother's death, is so delicate that it is not expected to live. Three other children are very ill but may recover. The other, a son seven years old was taken to the Lock Haven hospital, where his condition is regarded as serious.

Capello Trial Expenses.

That Tony Capello's trial in Clinton County growing out of the death of Elizabeth Harley in a joy-ride was expensive, is emphasized by a published statement of part of the expenses, now near the $3,000 mark and not all in. The Coroner's inquest cost $38.58; Sheriff's account, $153.04; investigating, $259.68; Grand jury, $202.92; Traverse jury, $1,090.56; tipstaves, $180; Boyne brothers, lodging and boarding jurors, $506; several smaller items bring the total to $2,922.20.

Mail Auto Damaged.

The auto used by Frack Rodabaugh in delivering mail between Bellefonte and Lock Haven, through Nittany valley, was damaged the other day when the driver attempted to get out of a rut. The front axle broke and the car continued from the road, until striking a fence, which damaged one fender.

OVER THE COUNTY

Almost half the population of Millheim has been afflicted with grippe the past week.

C. F. Stover shipped a carload of cows from Coburn station to the east last week.

Rev. J. S. Hollenbach, of Aaronsburg, says his six Rhode Island Red hens laid 113 eggs during the month of January.

For several weeks the farmers in Penn's and Brush valleys have been hauling corn to the market, making use of the sledding while its good.

Morris Knoffsinger, who was seriously injured while at work in the White Rock quarries, after spending about nine months in the Williamsport hospital, is back to his parents' home in Pleasant Gap, able to hobble about on crutches and with hopes of recovering more fully.

Business in Bellefonte will be even better if a good road, a first-class road for automobiles, is extended from Penn's valley, over the mountain to connect with the brick on this side of the Nittany mountain, near Pleasant Gap.

The National Hotel in Millheim was recently purchased by Emory S. Ripka, of Centre Hall. Mr. Ripka has sold his home in Centre Hall to L. L. Smith. The latter also purchased the C. M. Smith store in Centre Hall and plans to convert it into a garage. C. M. Smith purchased the Auditorium and Wm. S. Shelton residence in Millheim. He expects to occupy the latter and to convert the Auditorium into a store room. Mr. Shelton plans to build a new house for himself this summer.

BASKET BALL SCORES

Bellefonte High Defeated Juniata Academy Lost to Pitt.

The Bellefonte High school basket ball team showed splendid improvement on last Friday evening in a tilt with the strong Juniata High team, on the local "Y" floor, winning with a rather one-side score, which was 48--15. However, the score does not fairly indicate the kind of game played. Both teams did their best and while the local team defeated the visitors by such a wide margin, they worked for it and used better skill than shown in a long time. To keep up such playing would put the Bellefonte High team well to the front before the season closes.

The Bellefonte Academy five wanted to get even with the Pitt Freshman team and take revenge for the defeat by a small margin which was handed the local team when in Pittsburgh recently. Everybody expected a good game on Friday evening in the armory, as a result, when the Academy met the Pitt Freshmen for the second time this season. The fans were disappointed when it was found that the Academy could not beat the visitors, the game being claimed by Pitt with a score of 34 to 23. However, the good game expected was there and it was only by breaks and unusual, skillful play that the game went as it did. The Pitt team played with a vigor and skill that assumed the aspects of a professional game.

At the armory on Saturday evening, the Academy played a winning game and scored 32—20 against the strong Westmont High school team of Johnstown. This was also a splendid game, although not as closely contested as on Friday evening.

In another splendid game on Saturday evening in the local "Y" the Bellefonte High school again demonstrated their prowess to good advantage winning from the Tyrone High school by the score of 24—23.

CHRIST'S KINGDOM NEAR

Interesting Lecture on "Divine Plan of the Ages."

A. S. Eby, of Altoona, delivered a lecture on Sunday afternoon in Firemen's hall, Milesburg, on the subject, "Divine Plan of the Ages," which was highly appreciated by all present. He said in substance:

"God has a wonderful plan regarding mankind, which has been hid for ages, now due time to be made known. Up until the conversion of Cornelius He had been dealing with the Jewish nation (Amos 3:2); during the Gospel age calling out a people for His name, the bride of Christ, Rev 7th and 14th chapters; after this He will return and rebuild the tabernacle of David that the residue might seek after the Lord, Acts 15:14-19; the Christ head and body is about completed, soon restitution blessings will begin Acts. 3:19-21, the ransom will be testified in due time 1 Tim. 2:5, 6 Christ's Millennial reign, then all will be granted a fair and impartial trial for life, which was lost in Adam, and if obedient to the laws of the kingdom will live forever on the earth.

"The Jews in great numbers are returning to Palestine, the land God gave Abraham, and the promise made Gen. 12:3 is about to be falfilled. Soon other nation will become jealous on account of the prosperity of the land and march against the city of unwalled villages Ezek. 38:11-17, Jacob's trouble; then God will fight for them as in days of old. All will recognize the establishment of the kingdom. The law will then go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, Isa. 2:3."

Fire at State College.

Fire that caused considerable excitement at State College, but did little damage excepting to burn a quantity of gasoline, broke out when flames came in contact with some gasoline being drawn from the tank at the Marion Myers station on Saturday. An explosion was feared, but fortunately the flames did not get inside the tank and it did not occur. The filling station is in the centre of the town and quite a costly fire would likely have resulted if the flames had gotten beyond control. As an emergency step, the Bellefonte fire department was called. The firemen were making preparations to respond, when a second message informed them the fire was extinguished.

Women Work for Peace.

"If the organized efforts of women can avail aught, there is hope that this tired old world may some day be at peace." This is a natural observation when one learns of the activities of the Women's International League for peace and freedom an organization that is bringing together the womanhood of all the nations of the world, and is moulding a sentiment of international peace. Beginning on Feb. 22, Washington's birthday, the Pennsylvania branch will begin an intensive campaign. All those who wish to help in uniting all women against all war can do so by joining and encouraging others to join. Literature and additional information can be furnished by Mrs. Robert Mills Beach, Bellefonte, Pa., chairman for Centre County.

The First Orchestra.

In mentioning last week that Miss Susan Ohnmacht was a member of the first orchestra in Bellefonte, some of the information obtained was apparently not altogether correct. Prior to the time that Miss Ohnmacht was in the orchestra, "The Republican" on Friday was informed by Charles Smith, a well known local musician, that his father Frederick Smith, had organized an orchestra in which F. Potts Green and Joseph McMeen were members. Later, in the same orchestra in which Miss Ohnmacht was pianist, Mrs. Love, the first wife of the late Judge John G. Love, and Mrs. James R. Hughes at times played the piano, while Col. W. Fred Reynolds, Frank Shook and Charles Smith, were members of the orchestra at a later date.

Camp Fire Work Indorsed.

Testimony to the growth of the Camp Fire movement, as well as tribute to its efforts in the direction of better citizenship, is found in the fact that 12 universities and colleges in various parts of the country now have courses in Camp Fire work, for which academic credit is given. In addition, many cities have officially recognized the program by definitely correlating it with recreation work in the public schools and by giving the instructor the same status enjoyed by other teachers.

"Oh, but Aunt Madge, if only I were seventeen instead of twenty-seven! He's so wonderful, and I love him so hard it hurts, but I can't, I can't and I won't marry him. I'm just dead certain he isn't a day over twenty-two, for he came straight from high school here to college.

"No matter how I look I am twenty-seven, and I won't marry him. It's cradle snatching, pure and simple."

"Are you sure he's only twenty-two? Why don't you ask him?"

"I have, but he won't tell me."

"Don't worry, anyhow, and instead of grieving over being twenty-seven you'd better thank heaven you're not thirty-seven."

"Ah, but Aunt Madge, sometimes I feel like such a little hypocrite, but the way I'd lived all alone out there, with only dad, and him an invalid, I'd never had a bit of fun in my whole life until I came here to you four years ago and went to college."

"I'll admit, dear, you look fifteen years younger than when you first came to me."

"And I've been so happy. It was like suddenly becoming another person—some rich and feted princess. And I don't believe one of the boys and girls at college suspects I'm older than the average student."

"I don't know why they should. In many ways you're younger."

"You simply can't have any idea how wonderful Bob is. My heart flops around when I think of him."

"Well, if you've made up your mind, Nell, dear, that you won't marry him, the best thing you can do is to send him packing. It isn't fair to keep him hanging around."

"I guess you're right. I'll have to tell him tonight that he mustn't come any more, but what'll I do without him? Sometimes when I try to face it I feel as if I'd just stop living after he goes out of my life."

"But you won't, Nell. Think how many girls have to go through the same thing, and still they live, and usually find some one they care for even more in the end."

"That'll never be the case with me. You don't know how I love him."

It was less than an hour later that Nell Clayton went to her room to get ready for her caller.

"I'm going to look my best," she mused, "if it's to be our last night together. I want him to remember me that way."

She worked for half an hour curling and fixing her bobbed hair until each hair was in its proper place. Then she put on a saucy little yellow taffeta that brought out the pink in her cheeks and made her dark hair a striking contrast.

"Oh," said Bob, with a catch in his voice as he greeted her. "You look like a little girl tonight. And as dainty as a bit of china."

The admiration in his eyes made her heart leap for joy, but instantly she reminded herself that she must stop loving him. This was their last evening together.

"And, Nell, it makes it so much harder for me to tell you what I came to say because I'm afraid you won't understand.' He was talking on.

"Curses on the dress and curling iron," thought Nell, but outwardly she smiled up at him encouragingly.

"It ought never to be hard for you to tell me anything. I can't always understand. And then, too, I have something I must tell you tonight and it's going to take all the courage I have. You go first, then I'll talk."

"Nell, I've been deceiving you. I'm a hypocrite and I know you'll never forgive me." He was speaking hurriedly and the girl felt him tremble as he rushed on with his confession. "I'm a senior up there at college and I told you I went there straight from high school. It's a lie—an awful, terrible lie. I was in the war and got wounded, and I was so sensitive about it I could not bear to hear it mentioned. So I decided the best way to forget was to go to a place where no one knew me and never to let it out that I had been in the army. If only you were older so you could understand. Any of the fellows who've been through it know how it is. I've got half a dozen friends who are doing the same thing and they're getting back to normal, too. But, Nell, dear, I'll be thirty years old in March and I feel like a father to you. Soon I'll be wanting to settle down to quiet evenings at home and you'll—"

"Oh, Bob, I'm so glad, glad that everything's like it is," broke in Nell, "and I wish you'd propose to me again so I could say 'yes.'"

"Then you really do understand?" he asked incredulously.

"Understand? I know exactly how you feel, dear."

"You wonderful, sympathetic little mite! Now, what was it you were going to tell me?"

"Nothing now."

Pleased Herself.

She was a very self-willed little girl, and a teacher who happened to be taking a class at her school asked in despair: "Rose, would you mind telling me whether you ever do what you're told?"

The maiden gave the question her serious attention for a moment, and then replied that she was not sure.

"But," she added, with the cheerful air of one offering an excellent substitute, "I nearly always do what I want."

Pretty Things that are made at Home

RIBBON novelties may come and go, but the ribbon shopping bag goes on forever. It goes on being made of the new enticing ribbons that reflect the mode, and it goes on wearing out, to be replaced by a new one. It is a bit of elegance—and sometimes a bit of magnificence—that appeals to the love of finery and luxury that is born right in us, and it is something which most women can make for themselves.

These attractive bags, shown in the picture, do not appear to require more than the average knowledge of sewing, to make them. One of them is a combination of brocade ribbon with a plain satin ribbon, having a narrower ribbon, in a contrasting color, stitched to it. The lengths of ribbon are machine stitched together, the raw edges of the seam turned under and sewed down. A narrow hem along one edge forms a casing for ribbon hangers and the other edge is drawn up to form the bottom of the bag. Two very handsome silk tassels decorate it.

A plain heavy satin ribbon makes the pretty tailored bag at the center of the group, which depends on a narrow pin-striped ribbon and neat tucks for its embellishment. This pin-striped ribbon is doubled lengthwise to form the handles. A celluloid mounting is used for this model, which is lined with soft satin. It is pretty in brown with tortoise shell mount. The remaining bag, of black moire, is lined with changeable taffeta and has a strap that fastens with a snap fastener. The hangers are of heavy black grosgrain ribbon.

Along with the appearance in the North of the joyously welcomed pussy willow, comes the survey of accepted styles in spring millinery by the women who are to wear it. Many of these styles are the survivors of that buoyant fashion promenade that is passing in review in the southern resorts where their record of success for yesterday presages a further triumph for tomorrow. The weather man may do all he can to discourage the belief that spring is anywhere near, but that will not keep us from anticipating it by the purchase of a hat for Easter, which falls this year on the first day of April.

Nothing more beautiful or desirable in millinery will follow these first displays and it is good business to make an early selection while materials are at their best; for sometimes manufacturers undertake to cheapen them as they grow in popularity. It is a season of many fabric hats—as may be gathered from the models that make up the group pictured here. These are either all fabric or fabric and braids combined. They are a cheerful company in which color and lustrous surfaces combine to make brilliant millinery. There are two all-black hats among them, but all-black in gleaming materials that cannot be somber.

One of these appears at the top of the group in which taffeta is laid over a braid body, and decorated with braid stitched over it. Two loops of handsome moire ribbon fall over the brim. The little poke shape at the right is made of taffeta also, in blue and tan, changeable weave, with silk flowers repeating these colors.

A lovely wide brimmed hat, at the left, is of tagel braid—its crown covered with figured silk in many strong, rich colors, repeated in the border of narrow ribbons that edge the underbrim. A large cluster of grapes, that take up these colors and repeat them in other tones, serves for trimming. Another interpretation of the poke shape is shown made of novelty cloth in bright red with applique in black lacquered foliage finished with black ribbon and ends. Finally a smart little draped shape of a lustrous fabric supports two long ostrich quills.

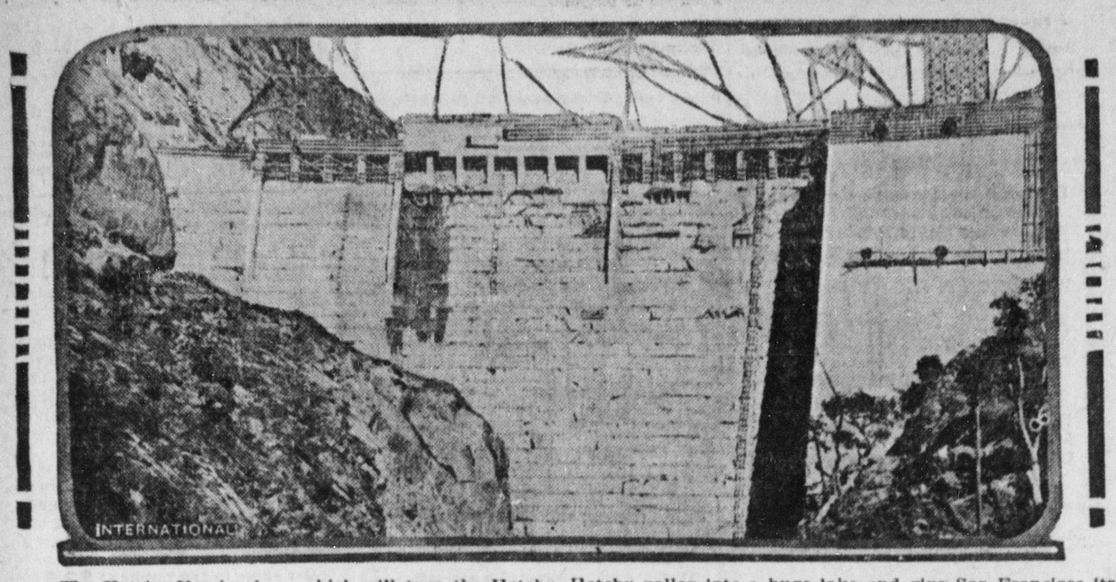
Great Dam for San Francisco's New Reservoir



The Hetchy Hetchy dam, which will turn the Hetchy Hetchy valley into a huge lake and give San Francisco its new water supply, is nearing completion. The dam will be one of the largest in the country. It is 150 feet under the bed of the stream, and will be 312 feet high, 900 feet wide, with a thickness of 200 feet at the base, and about 25 feet at the top. The lake will be more than seven miles long and a mile wide. The total cost of constructing the reservoir amounts to about nine million dollars. The photograph shows part of the wall of the great dam.

Dead Overseas Get Kind Care

American Cemeteries Models for Other Nations That Were in World War.

PLOTS GROWING IN BEAUTY

30,511 of the Nation's Fallen Lie in Eight Burial Places—150 Men Are Employed in Work of Caring for Cemeteries.

Washington.—The eight cemeteries in Europe, in which are 30,000 American soldier dead, are maintained so splendidly that they are models for the other nations that participated in the World war. The French secretary of war recently told Colonel Rethers, in charge of the graves registration service in Europe, that the American cemetery at Romagne was the most impressive one he had ever seen. The American government has done all in its power to make the burial places beautiful.

Six are in France, one is in Belgium and the other is in England. Most of the French plots were selected to commemorate the battles fought in the vicinities. The cemetery at Romagne represents the Argonne fighting, the one at Thiacourt the battle of St. Mihiel. There is one at Belleau Wood, significant of the action there; one at Nesles, about 25 miles north of Chateau-Thierry; one at Suresnes, near Paris, in which are buried those who died in the hospitals around Paris, and one at Bony, in which are the dead of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth divisions, which fought with the English.

In Flanders Field.

The Flanders Field cemetery, in southern Belgium, contains the bodies of 365 Americans who fought with the English in Belgium. The eighth of the cemeteries is in Brookwood, England, containing the bodies of 435 Americans who died in the British isles.

The cemetery at Romagne contains the largest number of bodies, 13,977. It covers 130 acres. The next largest is at Nesles, which covers 48 acres and contains the bodies of 6,033. In all there are 30,511 American soldiers, sailors and marines buried in Europe.

Of this number only 1,600, or about 2 per cent, are unknown dead. The number of unknown dead was reduced by 200 during the year. It is possible others of the dead will be identified as investigations proceed. Every effort is being made to gain new identifications. Descriptions taken at the time of burial are being checked up with descriptions obtained from army papers and from relatives of those who fell. The work is slow and tedious, but is bringing some results.

Except where unknown dead are being identified no more bodies are being returned to the United States. This ceased a year ago, after a period in which relatives might request the return of bodies. The War department feels that if permission for the return of bodies were to continue the cemeteries would be in a constant upheaval and their beauty would be marred. But it is only fair to the relatives of soldiers newly identified that they be given the opportunity of having the bodies returned. In instances of this kind 98 bodies were returned last year.

Few Unknown Dead.

In comparison with that of the other armies in the World war the number of American unknown dead is small. About 2 per cent of American dead are "unknowns." The French and British proportion is about 30 per cent.

In the American army the soldiers were required to wear two identification tags, one on a string around the neck and the other on the wrist. Most of the men wore the tags, but here and there were men who did not. The men in the British and French armies were much more lax in this regard than were the Americans.

The army appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1 carries $180,000 for the maintenance of the American cemeteries in Europe. Approximately 150 men are employed in the work. Nine are American army officers and the others, except for an army sergeant in charge of motor transportation, are civilians. A central office is maintained in Paris.

Difficulty has been experienced in getting grass to grow in some of the cemeteries. It is evident that sprinkling systems will have to be installed. At Romagne it was necessary to plant grass six times. To make the cemetery presentable for the large number of American visitors last summer the expedient of planting rye was resorted to temporarily.

In the French cemeteries the bodies are buried in individual graves, with just mounds over them without grass. But the French intend to adopt the American idea of a beautiful lawn effect.

UNFROZEN ARCTIC OCEAN SPOT

Waters of the Murman Coast Are Warmed by Gulf Stream.

Brought Into Limelight by Recent Dispute Between Britain and Russia Over Fishing Rights—Unknown Until War.

Washington.—The questioning recently of British fishermen's right to fish along the Murman coast almost led to a clash between Russians and British in those Far North waters, and the British decided to send a war vessel to the region for future protection. Something of this land on the fourth sea which Russia touches is told in the following bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society:

"When it is realized that the Murman coast is on the Arctic ocean, one naturally pictures a frozen waste, with even a solid sea in winter," says the bulletin. "But the long arm of the Gulf stream, stretched across the Atlantic, around the northern tip of Europe, and along the coast just beyond, makes the Arctic waters which bathe the northern end of Norway and the nearby strip of Russia more truly Atlantic waters. This is an open coast the year round while Arctic waters to the east and the gulfs of the Baltic far to the south are frozen solidly for many months.

"Foreign fishermen have been making the most of this region of iceless waters, where in the proper season schools of cod, herring and salmon abound. Chiefly, the fishing vessels are those of British and Norwegians who have maintained that they have the right to carry on their trade outside the three-mile limit. This, the Russans dispute, and have arrested boats nine miles off shore.

"The Russian fishermen of the Murman coast are a nomadic lot who live along the coast in the spring and summer and desert the country in winter.

"The Murman coast was practically unknown to the outside world until the blockade of the Baltic and Black seas during the World war made necessary dependence on the unused possible doorway in the North. An army of 100,000 laborers was set to work pushing a railroad from Petrograd to the port of Murmanx, where in an inlet 30 miles from the open sea, in a wide deep harbor free from currents and ice, the largest ocean freighters could dock. In spite of the greatest engineering difficulties through a country of bogs by summer and ice by winter, the line was completed, but only a little while before the Russian revolution came to make it useless.

"Several thousand American 'doughboys' were sent to the Murman coast with British, French and Italian contingents, to hold the railroads of the region, and spent long months in the cheerless region. When the war-time population left, the country slipped back, and now, except for the railroad villages, is almost as sparsely settled as before. A few Lapps live scattered over the Kola peninsula, whose northern edge forms the Murman coast, living largely on their reindeer. As in many Arctic regions, mosquitoes are a serious pest along the Murman coast in summer, and even the reindeer flee to the interior highlands to get away from them."

CROOK COULDN'T BEAT DEATH

King of "Con" Men Swindled While He Lived.

New York City and Chicago Furnished "Big Jack" Strosnider Many Victims Who Dropped Fortunes in Fake Sports.

New York.—John Strosnider, one of the most famous figures in American criminal history, is dead. He was the king of the confidence men and was known to police in New York city, Chicago, and several other large cities in America. "Big Jack" Strosnider, in his prime, swindled the credulous out of $1,000,000 to $2,000,000—and died almost penniless.

"I never rob an honest man because no honest may will fall for my proposition," he used to say. "I've taken a million from men who were a lot more crooked than I. The sharper they are, the better I like them. There's a sucker born every minute, except in New York city. There one is born every 30 seconds."

Strosnider first associated with the famous "Mayberry gang," promoters of the fake prize fight, foot race, and horse race swindles, but in a few years launched out for himself. With headquarters in New York city, he confined his activities to wire tapping and pay-off games. "Easy money" flowed from him as rapidly as it came. He bought a magnificent home in Brooklyn and gave parties for friends that cost him thousands of dollars. In all this time he had been in prison only once. He was pardoned in 1898.

Luck having turned against him in New York city, "Big Jack" went to Chicago and got busy. There he approached William T. Kirby, owner of a private bank, and swindled him of $20,000 on a fake horse bet. Kirby's loss threw his bank into ruin, and the victim sued. His story was doubted for a long time, but finally "Big Jack" was arrested and sent to prison for four years. He spent all his money fighting the case.

When he emerged, Strosnider took $70,000 from two other men and was caught again. He spent every penny defending himself, and finally escaped conviction. Police drove him back to New York city.

Last November he became ill. He went to his home in Salem, O., and, December 31, died of cerebral hemorrhage. "Big Jack" operated so quietly that even his closest friends did not know of his death until a few days ago.

Tooth Knocked Out Kills Boy.

New York.—Relatives of two-year-old William Ellis, son of George Ellis, 56 Prospect street, Yonkers, disclosed that the death of the child was due to swallowing a tooth knocked out by an accident. The child was playing near a glass door that stood against a wall. The door toppled over and knocked out a tooth, which lodged in the windpipe.

A 70,000,000-bushel wheat shortage in France is causing that country to go back to wartime bread.

WOULD NOT TRADE FOR $10,000 CASH

Benefits From Taniac in Ending His Stomach and Rheumatic Troubles, Priceless, States Tucker.

"I wouldn't take $10,000 for the good Taniac has done me," declared W. E. Tucker, 1120 North 28th St., Richmond, Va., a boxmaker for the Allegheny Box Co., recently.

"I thought I would have to give up the job I had been on seventeen years, but Taniac has built me up eighteen pounds, and I never felt better in my life.

"I was so weak and run down and had lost so much weight and strength I just felt broken down all the time. I got up mornings awfully nervous, with no appetite, feeling like I hadn't slept a wink, and while on the job my nerves were so unstrung that the noise in the factory just tortured me. My liver wasn't acting right, and I suffered so much from rheumatism I could hardly use my arms.

"But Taniac has made a clean sweep of my troubles, and now, with plenty of strength and energy, I am working and feeling fine."

Taniac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

IMPRESSING HIS BEST GIRL

Plumber Felt He Had a Right to Be Proud of His Important Family Connections.

He was quite evidently a plumber, and as he sat with his "best girl" back of the Woman upon the bus he explained that he had been working a little harder lately—the cold weather made their work harder in those buildings which were unheated and in which they were putting the plumbing. It was different in the summer, when the buildings were restfully cool.

And then the bus passed by the big "mansions" on the drive.

The plumber began to boast. Pride is so curious a thing.

"My dad," he said, "had the contract to put in the plumbing in almost every swell house in this city. Yep," he continued boastfully, "he's got the finest lot of customers you'd ever find."

And the girl whispered happy and proud admiration of the splendid family into which she was about to marry.—Chicago Journal.

Musical "Typewriter."

Music may be easily transported from one key to another, and also transcribed onto paper by means of a new devise that is in the nature of a musical typewriter. The transposing apparatus consists of a portable keyboard that is superimposed upon the piano keyboard, along which it can be moved for a range of two octaves. Underneath each of the superimposed keys is a bent lever that transmits the impact of the finger to the corresponding piano key. Therefore, by shifting the superimposed keyboard, it is possible to change the key of any musical composition in any way desired. In connection with the transposing device is an attachment, which serves either as a score writer or to make a perforated record for player pianos.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

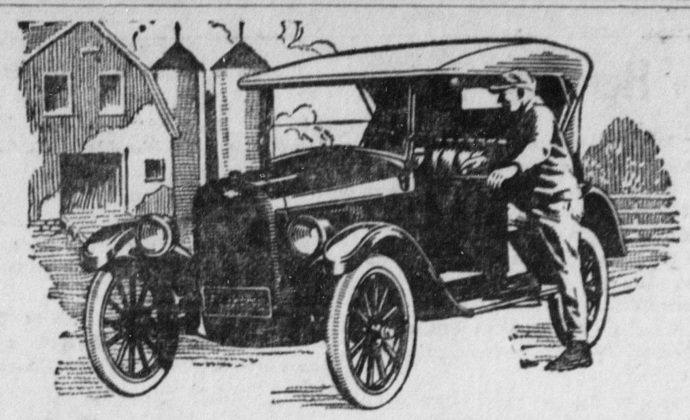
"Eh?"

"He am a food inspector."

Truly, the year seems flying when you tear off the January calendar leaf.



Why Farmers are Turning to CHEVROLET

for Economical Transportation

In 1922 Chevrolet jumped from seventh to second place in sales of all cars, and to first place in sales of fully equipped modern cars.

Purchases by farmers were the chief factor in this remarkable development.

Farmers want automobiles not only of low first price, but also of low later cost for operation and maintenance.

They want room, comfort, and the ability to stand up under hard conditions.

They find that Chevrolet, fully equipped as sold, is the best value per dollar in the low-priced field, and neighbors tell them it costs less per mile to operate.

MERELY USED AS A PARABLE

Individual Cited as Example of Carelessness Existed Only in the Imagination of Minister.

At the little church the minister, a colored man, announced that he regretted to state that a certain brother had retired to rest the night before without locking the door of his fowl house, and on rising in the morning had found that all his chickens had disappeared.

"I dont want to be personal," he added, "but I hab my suspicions as to who stole dem chickens. I shall be glad if the man who took dem will not put any money in the box when it is passed round, and then I shall know if dose suspicions are right or not."

Every one present contributed.

"Now, breddern," announced the minister. "I don't want your dinners spoilt by wonderin' where dat brudder lives who don't lock his chickuns up at night. Dat brudder don't exist, mah friends; he was a parable for the purpose of finance."

Was Not That Serious.

Elinor got a new tricycle and the next morning she announced that she was too ill to go to kindergarten.

Mother had her suspicions, which later were confirmed when, after an hour or so of lying in bed, Elinor observed, "I don't think I'm sick enough to hurt that tricycle any."

COMPLIMENT THAT RANG TRUE

Little Indianapolis Newsboy Proved He Had His Share of the Wit of His Race.

She is one of Indianapolis' most agreeable and attractive young business women, who has fallen into the habit of bringing all sorts of presents to a little Irish newsboy who sells papers not far from the News office. The other evening she brought him a pair of warm gloves, and he racked his little Irish brain for suitable thanks for her.

And finally they came with a true Irish compliment. "Lady," he said, "I'm glad the likes of you is an old maid. If you were married and your boys sold newspapers on this street, and bein' anything like yourself, the rest of us kids would have to go out of business."

The business woman says that was the best compliment she ever received.—Indianapolis News.

Woman's Heartlessness.

"I hear tell that Gabe Gawkey is figgering on getting a divorce from his wife," said a neighbor. "What's the matter with her, anyway?"

"She's plumb heartless!" replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, Ark. "He talked about some spring medicine and she up and told him that the best kind to suit his case was a bucksaw and an ax. That there infernal lady hain't got no more feelings than a snapping turtle!"—Kansas City Star.

Good work of the firemen kept the damage small as a strong wind was blowing and would have soon fanned the flames into a costly fire had it not been for their prompt and efficient work.
